You can make big money making wells. This is one of the few lines of work that are not over crowded. The demand for well is far greater than can be supplied by the machines now at work.
Well Drillers cannot dig deep enough. They have no power to reach down into the hard ground. Well Machinery, for making deep or shallow wells of all sizes, for all purposes and in all kinds of ground. Our machines are the most up-to-date on the market.
contain all the latest improvements. We hold the only patent in the world. Our perfect wells are easily opened and are very safe to drink from. Write to-day for our free Catalog A.

COLLECTING POSTAGE STAMPS

World-wide Hobby That Is to be Respected.

Probably the collection of postage stamps was begun simultaneously with the issue of the first stamps, which took place in London in May, 1840—a circumstance that favors this view being that, in 1842, Punch ridiculed collectors. It was not until twenty years later, however, that stamp collecting began to be systematically carried on, and the recorded history of the science or art, or pastime, which ever one may choose to call it, appears to date from 1862, when the first English and American catalogues were published in that year, so was the first attempt at a stamp album, and the periodical literature of the hobby started in England during the same year. It was not until 1896 that the great club of collectors, the Philatelic Society of London, was organized, and, though several local associations precluded our own national body, the American Philatelic Society, delayed to form until several years after that. Now the nations are filled with municipal or general associations, and the last British philatelic congress more than forty were represented, and the number of them in the world at large is said to exceed 400.

During the fifty years, armies of collectors have assailed the dealers, always in the direction of advancing prices. It would be safe to say that certain Marianne stamps there is a standing offer of $10,000 apiece, and it is believed that the world's largest collection cost its owner, a French nobleman, more than a million dollars. Such incidental details of the hobby are not to be taken too seriously, but the avocation to which they are related, and one's respect for it, surely increase. In May of this jubilee year, he should visit the British philatelic congress, or if in August he should go to Springfield to attend the annual meeting of our American association. Neither the children nor the folk will be found in these gatherings, which will be conspicuously composed of learned, elderly citizens, most of them possessed of substantial bank accounts. That, of course, does not argue that young people should not be encouraged to take up stamp collecting, but rather that they should be. It is a hobby more expensive than any other hobby; it offers possibilities of great profit, and incidentally it assures the collector of a wide and more accurate knowledge of geography and history than was ever gained by any but the most superficial perusal of text books. —The Boston Transcript.

Scottish Copper Discovery

What is confidently believed to be a payable copper deposit has been discovered at Killbuck, in Argyllshire, near the shores of Loch Fyne. For some weeks past a company has been energetically prosecuting prospecting operations, and as a result a ledge at least 6 feet thick has been proved for a considerable distance north and south of the point at which it was found. The copper is found in the form of carbonate and sulphide in a limited zone. Mining operations are to be initiated on a considerable scale without delay.

Cassio's Luper.
Sung Poo, a bright Chinese lad in the Toronto General Hospital suffering from an advanced stage of leprosy, and his case has caused much interest. This is not the first nor only case in Canada. Until four years ago the leprosy was a disease of the tropics, but in 1904 it was reported that patients on D'Arcy Island, just off the Pacific coast. At one time there were 300 Chinese cases of this disease in British Columbia, and fearing that it would spread, the Canadian Government isolated the patients on D'Arcy Island. Four years ago the disease had carried off all its prey, except a few Chinese, and they were shipped to Canton, where they are still supported by the Canadian government.

There is still another hospital for these unfortunate. It is at Tracadie, New Brunswick. This hospital was opened about fifteen years ago when leprosy broke out in that province. Most of the patients were Norwegians, but there were also a few Chinese. The government supplies the funds for its support.

Mixed Marriages.

How numerous are mixed marriages in the Province of Ontario is shown conclusively by the official report of the Deputy Registrar General McCullough, which has just been made public. There were 665 men and 844 women of the Roman Catholic faith who married others than members of their own church.

Roman Catholic men to the number of 178 married among Anglican women; 128 Roman Catholic men took Methodist brides; 157 Catholics took Methodist brides; 79 married Anglican women.

The city of Windsor continues to be the centre of Ontario. In the year 1904 there were 303 marriages in that place, and in 1910 no less than 320. There were 24,008 marriages registered for the year 1910. This is an increase of 1,071 for the year.

There were 55,271 births, males 25,068, females 22,207. Deaths: totalled 42,530.

SNOWSHOE CAVALRY.

Interesting Winter Military Experiment Made in Eastern Ontario.
Two parties of Canadian military officers engaged in a novel tactical exercise between Ottawa and Prescott on March 9 and 10. The parties were commanded respectively by Lt. Col. Murray, D.S.O., of Ottawa, and Lt. Col. Hurst, of Prescott. The idea was to test the possibility of using snowshoes as a "cavalry scout" for forest operations in winter.

The snowshoe used was 52 inches in length, and varied from four to eight miles in width. Each party of seven hauled its blankets, cooking utensils, and two days' rations on a toboggan. The advance was made at 8 a.m. on March 9. Hanks were awarded for thoroughness of scouting on foot, keeping up lateral communication, comfort in bivouacking, great out penetration of area from starting point, and driving in enemy's "scouts."

The Ottawa party made 22 miles the first day, and bivouacked at 4 p.m. in a place of great natural beauty. The Brockville party advanced to Spencerville, about 17 miles. Both parties moved on the morning of March 10, and came in contact at 8 o'clock on the morning of March 10, with the result that the Brockville party was forced to retreat. The line, which at that portion of the area was four and one-half miles wide. The Ottawa party lost one man, and the Brockville party lost one. Though the temperatures were only four below zero, the ride off eloped the participants. The last British party in a number of cases the weapons could neither be loaded nor fired, and the result was a tactical success for the Ottawa party.

As a Horrible Example.
Advocates both for and against Home Rule for Ireland use Canada to illustrate and support their arguments. The Canadian case for the British position is assured that Mr. Atkinson's bill will place Ireland in the same position as the other Provinces of the Dominion. Equally strong assurances are given by the other side that complete autonomy such as Canada enjoys is contemplated by the Minister.

Sir W. Max Aitken told his constituents the other day that the Government were declining to meet their claim for Home Rule very largely on the basis of the experience in Canada. Even on this ground, predicted the Minister, the Government would not be deterred. He said, had caused difficulties and disagreements from the fact that the Government of Canada, by the authority of the provinces exercised from time to time in opposition to the Government of Canada. Of course, he finds confirmation of this argument in the cases which have been brought before the Dominion Council and are entered on the Cases List of the Attorney-General of Canada (or some other province's X, the Attorney-General for Canada). But after all, this is a peaceful method of settling squabbles, and the amendment of law and gown and calumny and abuse have no relation to the shrapnel-swept battlefields which are promised if an Irish Parliament is established at College Green.

The Kaiser's Character.
There is much that one cannot help liking in the character of Wilhelm II. One of those who know him best appreciate him. Impetuous and autocratic to a degree he undoubtedly is, but he is not a tyrant. He is also extremely busy in his own mind, and he is not a man who is easily diverted from his purpose. He is also extremely busy in his own mind, and he is not a man who is easily diverted from his purpose.

His "Great Speech."
A lawyer who happened to be at the "great speech" sort was addressing a jury at great length when his opponent, growing weary, went out to rest.

"Old Ironsides" is making a great speech, said some one to the bored attorney.

"Old Ironsides" always makes a great speech," said the attorney, "but I had occasion to announce to you two and two make four, we'd be just about enough to hurt it right out. Not so 'Old Ironsides' now."

It is a fact that particular arithmetical rule known as the two of two integers added to two integers we should find, and I assure this book is not without fear of successful contradiction, we, I repeat, should find by the particular arithmetical formula before mentioned, and, sir, I hold myself perfectly responsible for the assertion that an about make—the sum of two given integers added to the two other integers would be four.

The trouble with marriage in these latter days is that each partner is a playmate, and so many women for a playmate, nobody seems to want a helpmate any more.

The true, strong, and sound mind is the mind that can embrace equally great things and small.

The Surfeit of the Wealthy.

What a man spends on himself he should have earned by services to the world. At the present day, we are the class, as a rule, in a state of surfeit and disgrace after meat. Plethora has filled us with indifference, and we are covered from head to foot with the calories of habitual gluttony. Born into what is called a certain rank, we live, as the saying is, up to our station.

We squander without enjoyment, because our fathers squandered. We eat of the best, not from delicacy, but from habit. And not only do we squander money from habit, but still more pitifully waste it in ostentation.

I can think of no more melancholy disgrace for a creature who professes either reason, or pleasure for his guide, than to spend the smallest fraction of his income upon that which he does not desire, and to keep a carriage in which you do not wish to drive, or a butler of whom you are afraid to speak.

Money, being a means of happiness, should make both parties happy. It is not good as a thing in itself, it should be twice blessed in its employment; and buyer and seller should both be satisfied. It is a thing of worth of profit out of every pound. Benjamin Franklin went so far as to say that he never had a penny laid out to his disadvantage.

My concern springs usually from a deeper source, to wit, from having heard a while when I did not want one. I find I regret this, or would regret the carriages, and I am not only on personal but on moral and philanthropic considerations.

For, first, in a world where money is wanted to buy books for eager students and food and medicine for starving children, and where a large majority are starved in their most immediate needs, it is surely base, stupid, and cruel to squander money when I am pushed by no appetite and enjoy no return of genuine satisfaction.

My philanthropy is wide enough in scope to include myself; and when I have made myself happy, I have at least one good reason for being so. I am not a man who is easily diverted from his purpose. He is also extremely busy in his own mind, and he is not a man who is easily diverted from his purpose.

THE CHINESE HOME

Curious Details of Oriental Wall-Writing.

It is difficult for the Occidental mind to picture the wall-writing of a Chinese home. Down a narrow lane one passes between two walls, behind which may be hovels or palaces (there is no telling which, since the one-story room beyond are invisible).

One pulls a string at a gateway, the address of some family of high degree. A servant appears, leads through another gateway, a flower courtyard, a passageway, perhaps an outer courtyard, a little room or two, and finally into a reception room, with its carved wood wainscoting and furniture, its porcelains and jades and bronzes, its blue-and-green-and-gold ceiling and its window patterns of paper panels.

Here the hostess appears, offers tea, and both with cakes and candied fruit or lotus buds. Then she may lead you through other courtyards, all with the usual one-story rooms around them, and into her private garden of rocks and pools, of pretty paths and bridges, of clustering trees and flowers.

In such a palace as this each courtyard with its surrounding rooms may be the special home of one of the sons and his wife and children; but somewhere in the maze of walls, under one of the low, tiled roofs, is the common dining-room, with the stoves beyond. Here the men of the family eat together twice a day, and afterward the women and children eat and converse at proper seasons. These are held in such reverence that no foot may pass above them, and therefore two-story dwellings are unknown in regions uncontaminated by foreign influence.—The Century.

CORRESPONDENCE

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of correspondents.—Ed.Dear Mr. Editor,—I should be very pleased if you would accept the following letter for publication in your next issue. I am sure it will be of some interest to your readers, and chiefly to the citizens of Blairmore.A few days ago I had my first opportunity of cruising through the Crows' Nest Pass, and of stopping off and witnessing the many vast enterprises which are developing the unlimited natural resources of that portion of the Canadian Rockies.I was particularly impressed with the modern lines upon which the towns of the Pass were building—the admirable townships,
their street lay-outs, water systems, etc., and the up-to-dateness of the business and public buildings.While in Blairmore, although much taken up with the beautiful location of the town and the magnificence of the surrounding hills, I was somewhat surprised at the unsanitary appearance of the post office of that town. The waiting room from all appearance had not known the presence of a broom for a considerable time; for the floor was literally covered with crap paper and other material that would be an eyesore to any visitor acquainted with the cleanliness generally represented in public buildings in towns of even less importance than Blairmore.Then there were standing around the waiting room a number of men who seemed to pride in the spatters of their expectation, which altogether made the place a nursery for any kind of disease germs and a menace to the public.
Such a state of affairs, Mr.
Editor, is a very poor advertisement for a town with such a bright future in store as has the town of Blairmore. I am surprised that the public should tolerate such conditions, and trust that such a spectacle as that witnessed by the writer in your local post office last week will not be allowed to meet the view of other visitors to your town.In mentioning the above matter
I do not pretend to know on whom to lay blame, for in many cases such a condition is partly attributable to the patrons of the post office who deliberately strew paper and other materials around without the slightest consideration for those in whose charge the institution has been placed.Thanking you for space, I remain,
Yours truly,
Lethbridge, June 3rd, 1912.

Keeping His Hand In

The hanger of Calgary Industrial Exhibition, June 28th to July 5th, is being distributed. The illustration depicts a cowboy, whose occupation has presumably been cut off by the superabundance of the grain grower,
"keeping his hand in" by raising a sheaf of wheat from among several shown on the opposite side of a barbed-wire fence. The delight of the cowboy in the success of his achievement is equalled by the seeming reluctance of the inanimate sheaf to be drawn towards its natural enemy and by the terror of the horse at witnessing the frivolous nature of his rider's employment."5000 Facts About Canada" For 1912The 1912 Edition of that popular and indispensable booklet, "5000 Facts about Canada," compiled by Frank Yeigh, the widely known writer and lecturer, and author of
"Through the Heart of Canada," is now out and is replete with new matter, including an outline map of Canada, a calendar and the new Census figures. In compact form it found a wealth of facts and figures of the Dominion that will prove a revelation of our natural resources and growth. The mass of information, gathered with infinite pains, should be in the hands of every intelligent Canadian, and the wide sale and popularity of the publication is easily

The June Rod and Gun

An illustrated story descriptive of a journey up into the Arctic slope is contributed by Dr. Luther Harvey as the opening number of the June issue of Rod and Gun in Canada published at Woodstock, Ont., by W. J. Taylor Limited. Vacation Camps follows and will furnish a pleasant solution of the problem what to do with the boy during the good old summer time. In an article on the Grand Cascapedia, the great salmon river of Easter Canada, Mrs. M. G. MacNeil McWhirter recalls famous sportsmen who have fished in its water, including Sir Charles Ellis, Lord Dufferin, the Marquis of Lorne, Lord Lansdowne and Stanley. A third article on the Culture of Black and Silver Foxes also appears in this issue and other stories and articles are in keeping with the character of the magazine and the time of the year.

Bob Coulthard

Gets the Job

Robert W. Coulthard, who was until recently manager of the West Canada collieries at Blairmore
has been engaged by the city committee to make a preliminary report on the coal lease that are still available. For this preliminary work Mr. Coulthard will receive $500 and expenses, and later if the committee should want the properties prospected more thoroughly Mr. Coulthard will work on a monthly salary of $800 or $700.While some of the members thought the fee a little stiff as they have only $2,500 to spend, still in view of the exceptional qualifications of the engineer in question, it was considered that Calgary was getting the services of a thoroughly qualified man very cheaply. Mr. Coulthard will look over the mines in the Bankhead district first and later go to the Highwood fields. Calgary Herald.

GREAT NORTHERN REACHES WINNIPEG

Extends Its Line From Neche on the Canadian Border into the Heart of the Metropolis of Canadian Northwest

The World's Largest Shipment of Agricultural Machinery Inaugurates the Service

The Great Northern Railway signalled its entrance into the City of Winnipeg over its own rails by handling the largest train load of agricultural machinery ever handled over any railroad in the world. One hundred cars of Oil Pull Traction engines manufactured by the M. Rumely Company of La Porte, Indiana, left St. Paul on Wednesday in two sections for Winnipeg.

By acquiring trackage rights into the city of Winnipeg, the Great Northern adds about seventy miles to its Canadian mileage. Already it has more than six hundred miles of line in Manitoba and British Columbia. The Great Northern Railway was a considerable factor during the winter of 1911 and 1912 in relieving grain congestion in Manitoba and eastern Saskatchewan. It handled about three thousand cars of grain through Portage La Prairie and about half of that amount through Emerson to the head of the lakes, this exclusive of what was handled over its own Manitoba lines.

The Great Northern has more than once helped out the people of Western Canada in connection with coal shortages. Last year it handled thousands of tons of coal through Alberta.

The movement of the 100-car train of Rumely Company Oil Pull Traction engines from St. Paul to Winnipeg is a symbol of the two greatest factors which have contributed to the agricultural development of Northwestern Canada, the railroad and the traction engine. Prior to the movement of the world's largest train load of traction engines, the M. Rumely Company shipped to Winnipeg over 150 cars of traction engines destined to the grain fields of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

This great trainload of 100 Oil Pull tractors was valued at approximately a quarter of a million of dollars when it left the factory, while freight and duty will materially increase this by the time it reaches Winnipeg. While the engines on the cars were of three different sizes the average weight was close to 25,000 pounds each or 1300 tons as a total. 100 brand new flat cars, each weighing 40,000 pounds, added 2000 tons more to the burden behind the great Mallet locomotives that handled the train.

These 100 engines would have sufficient power to equal the work of 5000 horses in stationary work, such as running the threshing separator and wool saw. For plowing and other work involving straight-forward motion the work of the engine would be cut in half, but still would equal the power of 2500 horses. In some cases they could be used to equal the work of a much greater number, since it is the practice to work the tractor-day and night in rush seasons. For each horsepower, however, a minimum of 25 acres of wheat land in cultivation can be estimated and from the 62,500 acres which could be plowed, seeded, harvested, threshed and hauled by these tractors in 100 ten hour days, we can safely estimate 1,562,500 bushels of grain added to Canada's wheat crop this year.

This shipment is only an incident as compared with the stream of agricultural machinery pouring into Western Canada. A recent report of the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa shows that in the three prairie provinces nearly 200 million acres of tillable land lie in a virgin state waiting for plows and mechanical power. From every factory in the States and from several eastern Canada factories, great shipments are going forward to answer the call for more wheat and more power to raise it. Western Canada last year bought $140 worth of tractors for every man, woman and child. Our factory in Indiana last year shipped 8 solid train loads into Western Canada before the 1st of July and this year is shipping 100 per cent more power machinery than it did a year ago.

The high cost of living is creating an unusual demand for bread, and in both our own Northwest and in Canada mechanical power has been the only solution. Horses are too high priced and too expensive to maintain, since they are ill about 8 hours out of every nine in the wheat country. They cannot be produced quickly enough to take care of the increased demand for wheat, and the oil tractor appeared on the scene just in time to take care of the whole difficulty. Fifty important trams on the continent are building tractors and extending their facilities every year because of the wonderful growth of the Northwest and Western Canada.

As an indication of the interest aroused by the passage of these trains it is related that when the first tractor train reached Regina, Sask., in March, 1911, nearly 500 citizens walked out in the yards, nearly a mile and a half, to greet its arrival. Business men in the West realize their dependence upon agriculture much more keenly than those in manufacturing towns, and both business men and farmers have become thoroughly imbued with the idea of using the machine for the heaviest work. A train load therefore that promises to add a million and a quarter of dollars to Canada's wealth this year is an event which aroused the keenest interest. Many of the tractors are going for use on lands that have already been put into use, but the majority will go to break up new soil, which is almost too tough for subjugation by animal power, and thus the sending of mechanical power means an actual addition to the resources of the West.

In this big train are a number of smaller tractors well adapted for general purpose work on land after it has once been broken, but the majority are of the bigger, slower, durable high-powered type that is in demand now in Canada for making farms out of raw prairie.

The train is accompanied by J. J. Rumely, Vice President of the M. Rumely Company, of La Porte, Indiana, makers of the Oil Pull Tractor; E. L. Bremer, Minneapolis, Manager of Rumely Products Co.; R. B. Rohlschek and L. W. Ellis of the Advertising Department of M. Rumely Co., several officials of the railroad company, and numerous dealers and salesmen who are each riding a few miles with the train as it passes through their various localities.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Walters came in town on Monday night.

Adam Lorimer was the preacher at Frank on Sunday last.

Mr. Andrews, scale inspector for the C.P.R., was in town on Tuesday.

The Rev. W. H. Irwin is at Edmonton at the Methodist conference.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Macdonald and family left town this week for Lethbridge.

Herbert Noble received a slight accident to his back in the Bellevue mine last week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Bardsley entertained a few friends to a social evening on Tuesday last.

The Bellevue boys' team visited Hillcrest, and Hillcrest showed them how to play football.

Bellevue football team played Coleman at Bellevue on Saturday last and beat them by 3 goals to 0.

The preacher at the Methodist church on Sunday was the Mr. Wycherly of Lille, who took for his subject, "Wanted a Man."

As J. Cousins was coming out of the mine on Monday he accidentally overbalanced himself and put his foot into a tub of boiling water by the lamp house.

The Bellevue older boys had a fine time in the Socialist hall on Saturday night. A large keg of the appetizing beverage was rolled in and the boys did justice to it in a short while. A pleasant social evening was spent.

A man by the name of Misson received an accident to his arm while working at the pillars in the Bellevue mine. He had only been at work about two or three days when the accident occurred, and had previously received injuries at the same place.

TENDERS WANTED

Sealed Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to Monday, June 12th, 1912, for the building and completion of a frame school house, according to plans and specifications which may be seen at the secretary-treasurer's office, Burns, Alberta. The successful tenderer to furnish marked bank checks for 10 per cent of contract price. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

J. C. CHESTER,
Secretary-Treasurer,
Burns School District No. 2364,
June 10, 1912.

Happenings in and Around Frank

FOR SALE—Good British Columbia Potatoes at Miner's Hotel, Frank. G. V. O'HARA.

Rev. W. T. Young, who has been attending the annual Methodist conference at Edmonton, is expected to arrive in town with his bride early next week.

George Lebrat created a sensation on Saturday afternoon, when he rushed up Main Street with his eyes gazing heavenward and shouting "war! war! war!" He claims to have seen a bunch of American armed airplanes going north, evidently to ensure peace among the great gathering of "sky-pilots" at Edmonton.

A bush fire was started at the rear of the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium on Monday afternoon, which for a time caused the residents of Frank considerable alarm. A large crowd of volunteers from Frank and Blairmore were soon on the scene with axes and succeeded in preventing the flames from spreading and the fire was confined to the east side of Goat Mountain. A change of wind at night brought new hope and by Tuesday evening the fire had burned itself out, without causing any serious damage beyond spoiling considerable of the beauty of the hillside.

Coleman Notes

T. Martin, of the International Correspondence Schools, spent Saturday in town.

Service every Sunday evening in St. Alban's church. Rev. D. Watkins-Jones, pastor.

A. C. Flammerfelt, president of the International Coal & Coke Co., was a visitor to town from Victoria on Friday last.

The opera house was crowded on Saturday night to witness "The Girl and the Tramp," and all were amused at the clever figure of Fred Byers as the tramp.

The H. G. Goodeve Co. have been awarded the contract for installing the heating and plumbing apparatus in the new Cosmopolitan hotel at Blairmore.

Coleman Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows will observe next Sunday as Decoration Day. It is expected that a large number of brethren from Blairmore will be present to assist at the ceremonies.

The contract for the erection of the new addition to the public school has been awarded to E. Disney. The H. G. Goodeve Co. have been given the contract for heating and plumbing, and Messrs. Higgins & Graham for painting. The whole work will cost in the neighborhood of $6,400.

The case of Sorenson vs. Westwood, an action for damages sustained on account of unskilled medical attendance to the wife of a miner in Coleman, was decided in favor of the plaintiff at Nacled last Friday. The court awarded the plaintiff $1,000 and costs as the amount of damages sustained.

Many are admiring the stand being taken by the Rev. D. Watkins-Jones in regard to Sunday games. While some of the sporting community allege that coming to working in the mines all through the week Sunday is the only chance they have for recreation, yet it is a recognized fact that nine-tenths of the ball-players are those employed at other vocations than that of mine-working and have off in financial assistance from the public.

Jones has taken a stand in which he deserves the support of every morally minded citizen. It is time that the rules laid down by the Lord's Day Alliance with respect to Sunday desecration should be enforced. The greatest lovers and supporters of sports lose all sympathy with the games as soon as the adept risk to make use of the Lord's Day for such purposes, and until Sunday games are put a stop to there will be a falling off in financial assistance from the public.
